Two Promoted at OMG EdgeSystems in Arden

ARDEN, N.C., Sept. 2016 – OMG EdgeSystems, a unit of OMG Roofing Products, has promoted Caleb Kiser to manufacturing engineer and Stephen Jones to design engineer, the company announced today.

In his newly created position, Caleb is responsible for developing and implementing optimal, cost-effective manufacturing processes and methods that improve efficiency and increase productivity. He will report to Kevin Bramlett, operations manager.

Caleb joined OMG in 2015 as a design engineer. Earlier he was the facility manager for Guthy Renker Fulfillment Services of Arden, N.C., where he was responsible for designing and implementing new factory layouts to increase capacity. He holds a bachelor's degree in mechatronics engineering from North Carolina State University and is pursuing a master's degree in industrial engineering at Clemson University.

In his new role, Stephen is responsible for designing and managing Edge Metal building projects from submittal stages through fabrication and installation. He continues to report to Paul Linton, engineering manager.

Stephen started with OMG in 2015 as a CAM technician. Prior to joining the company he was a CNC mill programmer with Anson Mechanical of Polkton, N.C. Stephen holds a bachelor's degree in industrial technology from Appalachian State University.

Headquartered in Agawam, Mass., OMG Roofing Products is a leading manufacturer of commercial roofing products in North America featuring specialty fasteners, insulation adhesives, drains, pipe supports, emergency repair tape, productivity tools and edge metal systems. Based in Arden, the OMG EdgeSystems Division is one of the premiere manufacturers of commercial edge metal systems including fascia, coping, drains and custom metal work.
